

Portuguese terms are divided into A and B ends

Overview

In Portuguese grammar, nouns, adjectives, pronouns, and articles are moderately inflected: there are two genders (masculine and feminine) and two numbers (singular and plural). The case system of the ancestor language, Latin, has been lost, but personal pronouns are still declined with three main types of forms: subject, object of verb, and object of preposition. Most nouns and many. Sentence structure Like most Indo-European languages, including, Portuguese classifies most of its lexicon into four :,,, and. These are "open" classes, in the sense that they readil. Portuguese declarative sentences, as in many languages, are the least marked ones. Imperative sentences use the imperative mood for the second person. For other grammatic. Portuguese has definite and indefinite articles, with different forms according to the gender and number of the noun to which they refer: singular plural meaning masculine feminine masculine f.
